

Founder Pattern Success Summary

The analysis shown from the Shark Tank USA dataset indicates that the higher the number of investors, the greater the total valuation earned on a proposal. This indicates that the deals that attracted multiple sharks boasted the highest valuation amounts. The pitchers of these deals will have a greater chance of long-term success due to the investments than those with low number of shark involvement. The chart below highlights the percentage of valuation earned per investor.

The legend represents the number of the investor per sector while the percentage data labels show the proportion of the total valuation across all 16 seasons of Shark Tank USA. 73% of the valuation amount was raised by those who were able to attract all sharks present whilst 25% attributed for those with an 80% attraction rate.
